Miss Mary C. O'Brien, principal of the primary school, on the ground floor, telephoned up to Mrs. Pell, principal of the grammar grades, that the children were a little restless with the clanging of fire apparatus, added to the armoyance of smoke; so Mrs. Pell reached over to a button on her desk and pushed it three times.

Instantly the fire gong in each room clanged. At the first sound every child was up and exect headde his or her desk. Three minutes and five seconde later the entire school stood at parade rest on the ground floor, with a teacher at each of the twenty doors, ready to let them all out. Ten minutes later all were back in their places. The fire was out.

the younger children lay all nifire and flames creeping up the window curtains.

The little girl dragged Minnie and Hyman from the biasing bed and into a rear room; but in her excitement she was unable to turn the lock on the door leading to the hallway. Hyman Rubison, a neighbor, heard her screams, and broke down the door.

When he had the three children safely in the hall he ran to the bedroom, pulled down the biasing curtains Laboratory. Falladelphia.—Advi.
